— Edward I dkr xxviii v 18 [8]

Peter le Wellip and Sibilla his wife, to Henry

30 acres of land in Burlond, one messuage 1 bovate of land in

In July 1297, Richard son of Richard Samage sued Richard de Draycote and Peter le Whelp, for having Wednesday 7 November 1296 seized a cow of his at a place called Stonyfurlong in the township of Burland, and having driven it to the house of Adam Noon in Burland and kept it there until it was released by Hugh Mauger.

Draycote says that that place is part of a half carucate of land that Richard Samage holds from him by homage and service of 4s a year (2s at Martinmas and 2s at Midsummer) and by fealty; that Philip de Draycote father of Richard de Draycote (whose heir Richard is) was seised by the hands of Reginald Samage (ancestor of the plaintiff, whose heir he is), and he, Richard de Draycote, was seised of 2s, being a half of the said yearly rent of 4s. Because Richard Samage denied the other 2s, which was now in arrear for three years, he distrained Richard Samage as his tenant.

Richard Samage says that Reginald his ancestor had two sons, one being Richard father of Richard, and the other Siward, to which two sons he gave by charter all his lands in Burland; to wit, half to Richard (his father) by service of 2s a year to Siward, the other half by service of 2s a year. Philip father of Richard de Draycote was seised of the service of 2s a year, and Richard de Draycote of the other, by the hands of Richard Samage his father. Richard de Draycote took fealty from him (Richard son of Richard) for the said service of 2s. Richard de Draycote denied that he had agreed to receive the rent of 4s in parts as Richard Samage claimed. In October Samage abandoned the suit, and was amerced one shilling.

However, in January 1298, Siward Samage then started another case against Draycote and Whelp, saying that they had taken a cow of his from his house in Burland and driven it to Draycote's park in Burland. Whelp stated that he was Draycote's bailiff, and that Siward was a tenant of Draycote at four shillings a year and was in arrear, so he had distrained him

On 6 May 1298 Richard Samage brought another suit against Draycote and Whelp, saying that on Saturday 19 February they seized a mare of his at a place called Stonyfurlong in the township of Burland, and having driven it to the house of Adam Noon in Burland, and kept it there for a week until it was released by royal writ. Whelp declined to answer without his master.

When Draycote eventually came to court, he said that Siward Samage was his tenant, holding four acres of land at a rent of 2s 2d for two years, but of which Siward had only paid him twopence. Siward replied that the rent was not a shilling a year, but a penny a year, which he had paid.

In February 1299 both cases were resolved by agreement: Richard and Siward Samage each paid the court a shilling for licence to agree.
