de Fowlshurst

Laurence Box's son William (see sub Box) transferred his father's messuage to Richard de Fowlshurst.

1294-5

Cheshire Fines 23 Edward I dkr xxviii v 25 [9]

William son of Laurence Box to Richard de Fugleshurst

A messuage in Nantwich

In October 1295, Isabella daughter of William de Fowlshurst of Legh accused Roger Russell and Margery Russell his mother and William Box of having disseised her of a messuage in Wych Malbanc. Roger and Margery said that they entered the premises when William Box and Isabella were married: so how could Isabella be disseised by her husband? The case was resumed in April 1296 when Isabella sued as Isabella who was wife of William Box: she said that until her divorce she could not contradict her husband: this time the suit also extended to include William de Wistanston for having disseised her of a messuage and 9 acres in Wistanston. Wistanston denied that she had ever possessed the Wistanston property. The Russells called William Box to warranty. In November 1296 Isabella dropped the cases.
